NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Edward Hunter, International News Service correspondent in Manchuria, has been arrested by Chinese troops between Changchung and Harbin, according to dispatches received here today from Tokyo.

One dispatch said that Hunter had been seized by the Chinese and was "missing."

Gen. Araki, Japanese minister of war, has wired Gen. Shigeru Honjo, Japanese commander in Manchuria, to try to effect Hunter's release.

At the same time Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, nominal commander of the Chinese troops in Manchuria, with headquarters now at Peiping, has been asked to wireless his commanders and attempt to learn Hunter's whereabouts.

Rival Chinese armies have been fighting in the zone between Changchung and Harbin for several weeks and it is not known into whose hands Hunter has fallen.

The International News Service correspondent, who has scored sensational and brilliant beats since he went to Mukden last October—the first neutral correspondent of any nation to penetrate the Manchurian fighting area—cabled International News Service Wednesday night that he had left Mukden for Harbin to cover the entry of the main Japanese forces under Gen. Tamano into the north Manchurian city.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Secretary of State Stimson today cabled instructions to Consul General George C. Hanson at Harbin, and Consul General M. S. Myers at Mukden, to do their utmost to effect the release of Edward S. Hunter, Manchurian correspondent for the International News Service, who is reported held captive by retreating Chinese forces.

As the first American correspondent in Manchuria, Hunter's dispatches are well known to state department officials, and at times they have leaned heavily upon them for news as to what actually has been transpiring in that troubled area. Hunter's dispatches have frequently been days in advance of official reports.

Minister Nelson T. Johnson, now at Nanking, also was instructed to lend his efforts to obtain Hunter's release.

SOVIET FORCE NEAR BORDER

TOKYO, Feb. 5.—Seventy thousand Russian troops are massed in Vladivostok, Siberia, near the Manchurian border, presumably in view of the Japanese advance on Harbin.

This was revealed by the passengers of the S. S. Amakusa Maru, which arrived at Tsoruga today.

Martial law has been enforced in the Siberian city, and 400 white Russians, often accused of backing Japanese aims, were arrested there Tuesday.

Vladivostok sentries fired upon Japanese Tuesday night, the travel agency says.

SIX DEAD FROM COLD AND SNOW

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—With six deaths and numerous injuries attributed to Chicago's first heavy snowfall of the winter, mounting temperatures today gave promise of warm, clear weather over the week end.

Yesterday's blinding snowstorm was indirectly responsible for five deaths on the city streets, while the five-inch snow blanket's temptation to sleigh claimed one victim.

CRUSHED BY BRIDGE

WILMINGTON, O., Feb. 5.—Caught beneath the "Hildebrandt bridge" when it collapsed, Turner Bramham, 30, fought for his life today in Hale Hospital while physicians expressed little hope for his recovery.

Bramham, who was buried beneath the wreckage, suffered serious body bruises and cuts and possible fractures.

EVICTED BY FLAMES

FALL RIVER, Mass., Feb. 5.—Four families were driven to the street in a howling snowstorm today when flames caused $10,000 damage to a two-story wooden factory building near their home.

Snow hampered firemen in saving the building, which was occupied by the Cotton City Curtain Co.

POWERS RALLIED TO PEACE EFFORT FRANCE WILL PRESENT PLAN OF DISARMAMENT

GENEVA, Feb. 5.—Executing a sudden about-face on the question of arms reduction, France has decided to place before the disarmament conference in session here drastic proposals involving cuts in her military and naval establishment.

This was learned as the conference met this afternoon to elect seven vice-presidents from among the smaller powers to sit with the seven already appointed from among the great powers.

"We are anxious to contribute some positive help to the work of the conference," the French delegation announced, "and have decided to place several projects upon the table."

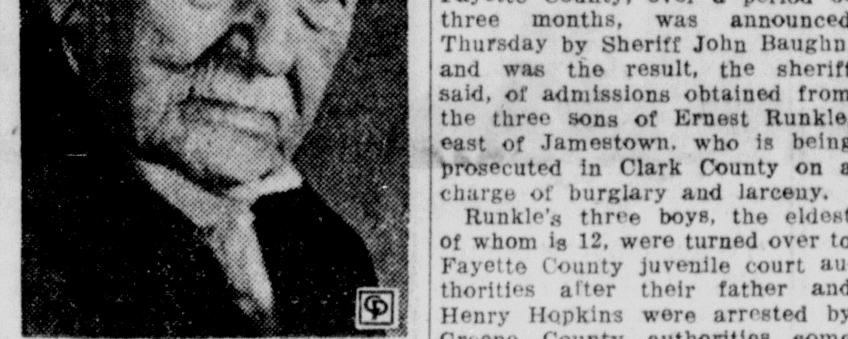

It was for this reason that Andre Tardieu, war minister, and head of the French delegation, refused to yield his place as second delegate to address the conference, to Chancellor Brüning of Germany.

Tardieu is to follow Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary.

It was reported France, if she obtains the security pledges she desires, will propose the abolition of submarines and possibly tanks and may even suggest that the air fleets of the European powers be placed under some sort of supervision and control by the League of Nations.

The French project has been passed upon by the cabinet at Paris as well as a special committee of national defense.

American Transport

SHANGHAI, Feb. 5.—The United States troop ship Chaumont docked at 6 o'clock tonight on the north shore of the Whangpoo River, bringing 1,000 men of the thirty-first infantry and 100 marines from Manila.

The American transport warped alongside the Chinese merchant's docks under the guns of a Japanese destroyer moored in midstream.

The khaki clad Yanks, on the docks and superstructure, wearing the old felt campaign hats, their upturned faces tanned by the tropical Philippine sun, watched heavy Japanese bombing, seaplanes with their bomb racks loaded with death-dealing missiles sail high above the Chaumont on the way to drop bombs on the Chinese city.

Moored at the dock astern of the Chaumont's berth was a squat, dark gray Japanese troop ship which arrived this morning with several thousand Nippon bluejacket reinforcements straight from Japan.

The ship unloaded tons of equipment and supplies, as well as large cannon and three-inch field pieces.

Tall, bearded East Indian Sikhs, with heads bound by yellow turbans, herded Chinese coolies with in ship yards, while the streets beyond the yards swarmed with full-armed patrols of Japanese sailors with bayoneted rifles.

The Yanks, pressing against the rails of the Chaumont on crowded decks, shivered in their overcoats, unaccustomed to the severe cold after the Philippine heat. To their ears came sounds of bursting shells and exploding bombs in the Chinese city, where the battle fury was increasing not a mile away.

French, Italian, British, and Portuguese officers mingled on the dock with waiting United States marine and navy officers in a medley of international uniforms, while up and down the crowded river, liners, freighters, ferryboats, coal barges, Chinese junks, and sampans all pushed and crowded.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Treasury balance as of Feb. 3, 1932, $95,121,24; expenditures $11,327,911.45; customs receipts $2,491,550.56.

MOTHER AND CHILD BURNED BY BLAST

NEW LEXINGTON, O., Feb. 5.—Mrs. Peter Langer, 30, and her 18-month-old daughter were in a serious condition today, suffering from burns received in a kerosene oil explosion which destroyed their home at Chapel Hill Thursday night.

While both victims were badly seared by the flames, physicians expressed hope for their recovery.

The explosion occurred when Mrs. Langer attempted to start a fire in a stove. The burning oil ignited their clothing and immediately spread to all parts of the building. The loss was estimated at $3,500.

STIMSON ASKS HELP IN CONCERTED MOVE TO END AGGRESSION

Japan Rejection Of Peace Motivates
World Action

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Secretary of State Stimson today was rallying the principal powers of the world to a definite plan to bring peace to the Orient.

Faced with the certainty that Japan is pursuing the same tactics at Shanghai that she pursued in the occupation of Manchuria, Stimson moved to enlist support of the major powers for concerted action to stem Japan's aggression.

This move was prompted by Nippon's practical rejection of the "peace proposals" put forward by United States and Great Britain, and supported by France and Italy, as a basis for settling the Shanghai situation. Japan has rejected two of the five points on which the peace proposals were based, and by qualifying her acceptance of the other three.

Simultaneously she landed 400 regular army troops between Woosung and Shanghai and dispatched 2,600 more, these regulars of the army are expected to "take over" from the blue jackets the task of capturing the city. The bluejackets have failed completely to accomplish that object in a full week of heavy fighting.

These and other moves of the Japanese military indicated that Japan had acted, while the peace proposals were under diplomatic discussion, to improve her position at Shanghai.

The arrival of the first contingent of Japanese regular army troops at Woosung yesterday indicated they had been dispatched from Japan two days ago at the time when the Japanese government officially announced the cabinet had forbidden the sending of regular army units to Shanghai.

These were the tactics observed during Japan's military drive against Manchuria. It was declared that every diplomatic move that was made for a peaceful solution of the Manchurian dispute was used by Japan to enable her to push her military penetration deeper into northeastern China.

A further parallel was drawn between the Manchurian campaign and the Shanghai situation when the Japanese naval commander ordered the repair of the British and American cables, which had been cut a few hours earlier at some point between the cable landing at Woosung and Shanghai. The commander conditioned his repair offer upon the privilege of furnishing a military guard for the repair men, and the occupation of the Chinese forts at Woosung by Japanese marines.

This recalled the incident of the Nonni River bridges in Manchuria, which were destroyed last fall. Japanese workmen were sent to repair these bridges. A strong military guard was provided for them.

As a result of an alleged attack by Chinese troops upon the repair guard, the Japanese army smashed the Chinese army and occupied the city of Tsitsihar, on the Chinese eastern railway. Japanese troops still occupy the city.

The evident determination of Japan to capture Shanghai and dominate the Yangtze River is causing the United States extreme concern, aside from the concern it feels for the safety of American lives and property in the international settlement at Shanghai.

The strain regarding the threat to American life and property in the settlement has been lessened by the arrival of practically the entire U. S. Asiatic fleet and 1,000 men of the 31st Infantry, from Manila. The situation is still regarded as critical, but to a lesser degree.

In the broader aspects of international trade in the Yangtze valley, the richest trading area in China, the situation darkened rather upon this latter situation that Stimson is now consulting with other powers.

The position of the Japanese fleet in the Yangtze River constitutes an effective blockade of Shanghai at any time Japan may decide.

Confronted with such a situation Stimson was believed to be soundly ing out all the nine power treaty signatories with a view to presenting an united front on the matter.

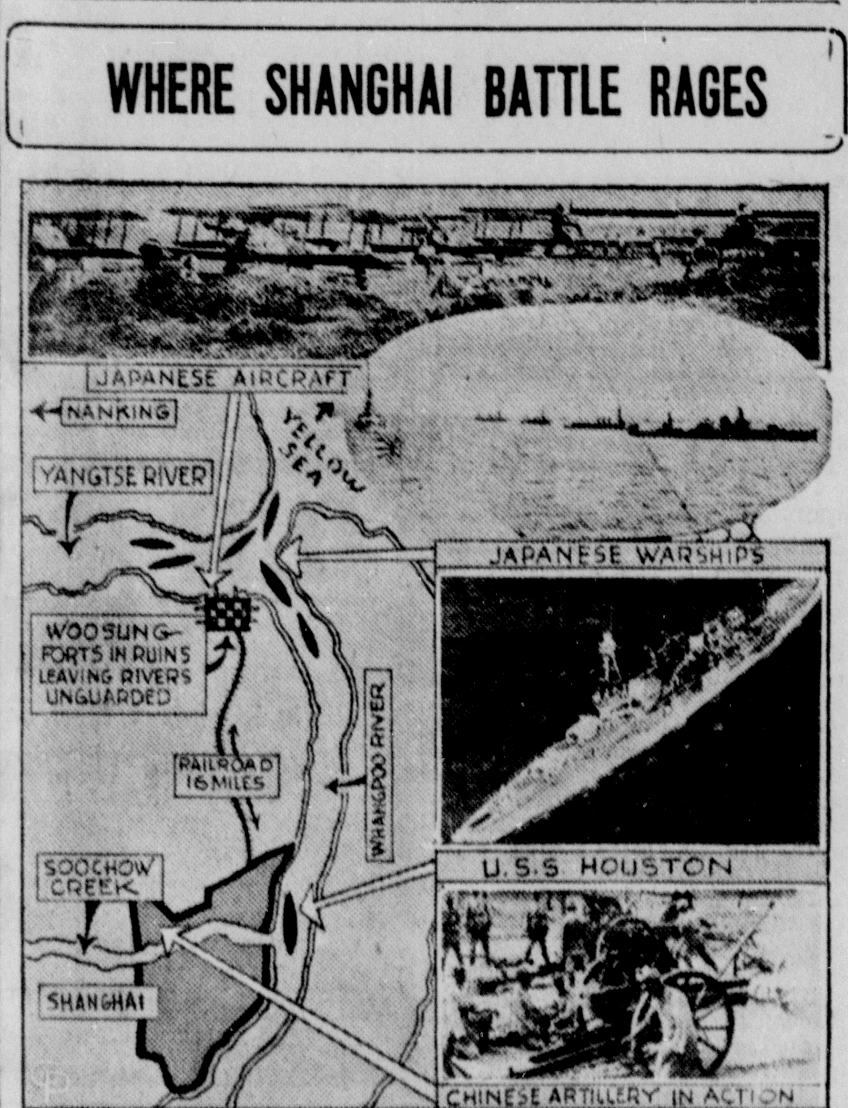

If this is done it will be the second time that Stimson has specifically invoked the nine power treaty in the Sino-Japanese difficulty. On Jan. 7 he invoked "American treaty rights" under which he did not specifically invite the other signatories to join in the action. He called in the representatives of those powers and advised them of the American action, but left it to their discretion whether to take similar action. None of the

WOOD ESTABLISHES NEW SPEED RECORD

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 5.—Gar Wood, white-haired American speed king, established a new world's water speed record here today by driving his Miss America IX over the Indian Creek course at the speed of 111.712 miles an hour.

FREE EMPLOYMENT BUREAU SET UP HERE TO ASSIST JOBLESS

Creation of a free unemployment bureau for Xenia and Greene County is announced by interested agencies headed by the Xenia Retail Merchants Association.

The bureau will start functioning Monday in offices on the second floor above the Famous Auto Supply Co., W. Main St. Mrs. H. R. Wirthlin, W. Main St., will be in charge of the office.

The bureau was created to coordinate efforts of the merchants association, Poody Post, American Legion, the county commissioners and other agencies to supply Greene County jobless men with positions in public works and other building programs being undertaken.

It will cooperate with contractors and assign them men as needed. Cooperation of contractors of public bridge projects and on building construction at the O. S. and S. O. Home has been promised and the neediest of applicants will be given preference in assigning labor.

Details of the project will be revealed tomorrow in an advertisement published by the retail merchants. The ad will contain a coupon which jobless applicants must fill out giving their name, address, kind of employment desired and other information. Applicants will then file these coupons with the bureau and notify the bureau how they can be called for work.

Miss Henrietta Beard, director of the federal-state city employment bureau in Dayton, has advised the local agencies in establishing the bureau and will be here Monday to assist in getting it started properly.

Because of scarcity of work jobs will be related among unemployed to give all at least part-time work, it is said.

INDIAN FINDS EIGHT KILLED IN AIR CRASH

Flying Tragedy Is Revealed As Plane Found Wrecked

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 5.—Led by Paul Appodaca, an Indian cowboy, a solemn group of men trekked through heavy snow today to take to Bakersfield the eight bodies of victims of the San Francisco-to-Los Angeles airplane that crashed last Friday at the extreme top of west of Los Angeles.

Appodaca found the burned and crumpled wreckage on a 2,000-foot slope four miles northwest of Lebec last yesterday. It had been hidden by snow from the eyes of scores of pilots who had flown over.

The body of one of the three women passengers, Mrs. F. H. Pickels of San Diego, had been thrown twenty feet from the plane. Bodies of the others, charred and mangled, were huddled in the front of the plane. Pilot J. V. Sandblom's body was found crushed and burned under the twisted wreckage of the three motors. He had been flying "blind" in a raging blizzard.

Experts said the eight persons had been killed outright. In addition to Mrs. Pickels the passengers were the Veteran Chief Deputy Sheriff Frank Dewar of Los Angeles; S. B. Swan, retired New Jersey capitalist; J. H. Pothemus and W. H. Smith, San Francisco business men; Miss Nita McGrath of Berkeley, Cal., and Miss Marie Combs of Hollywood.

BLAZE DESTROYS HANGAR AND PLANES

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—A $175,000 blaze destroyed the hangar of the Continental Airways Inc., and fifteen planes here today.

Believed to have been caused by crossed wires, the fire gained rapid headway, and the efforts of municipal airport attendants to fight it proved useless.

Exploding gasoline tanks added to the fire fighting hazard. No injuries were reported.

Infantry Will Attempt Capture After Chinese Repulse Bluejackets; Jap Plane Brought Down; U. S. Marines Arrive

(BULLETIN)
SHANGHAI, Feb. 5.—Five hundred Japanese marines landed in the international settlement tonight from a troop ship in the Whangpoo River and moved north to reinforce the Japanese lines at the resumption of the offensive in the Chapei district tomorrow.

By International News Service
As the international settlement in Shanghai reverberated today to the shocks of heavy artillery fire in the most intensive battle between Japanese and Chinese forces so far, between 3,000 and 4,000 Japanese infantrymen were landed between Paoshan and Liuhoo from two Japanese transports.

Admiral Montgomery M. Taylor, commanding American naval forces in Shanghai waters, advised the navy department in Washington that the Chapei district was a "total wreck" as the result of the Japanese bombardment.

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch to London from Shanghai said that Japanese authorities claimed capture of the entire Chapei area, but this was discredited by Floyd Gibbons and other International News Service correspondents on the scene.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 5.—Between three and four thousand Japanese troops were landed at daybreak today on the Yangtze River bank between Liuhoo and Paoshan, northwest of Woosung, to reinforce Japanese marines and blue-jackets in a grand offensive against the Chinese at Shanghai.

The reinforcements disembarked from two transports whose arrival off Woosung was exclusively reported by International News Service yesterday.

Another troopship, believed to be crowded, arrived at Shanghai tonight. A strong cordon of Japanese marines was thrown about the wharf and no one was permitted to approach. Apparently these men are to go ashore during the night to join at once in the attack on Chapei.

Confirmation of the secret landing of Chinese troops was taken from the Mamiya Maru and prepared for action against the Chinese.

ROMANTIC SECRETS TOLD BY PHYSICIAN IN RUTH JUDD TRIAL

Defense To Challenge
Testimony Given By
Psychiatrist

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 5.—Secrets of her love life with J. J. (Happy Jack) Halloran, Phoenix millionaire playboy, bared before a jury, Winifred Ruth Judd, the young wife of a middle-aged physician, spent a legal holiday in jail today as her attorneys prepared to challenge the sensational testimony of Dr. Joseph Catton, Stanford University psychiatrist.

Dr. Catton said Ruth, accused of killing Agnes Ann Lerol and Hedyv Samuelson, whose mangled bodies were shipped in trunks from Phoenix to Los Angeles, was sane, and knew the difference between right and wrong.

Dr. Catton in a detailed report of conversations with Ruth inferred she had a "phantom accomplice" in the "double trunk murder." He inferred she was shielding someone else who may have aided her.

Dr. Catton said Ruth admitted her romance with Halloran. "She told me she believed a woman could love two men," he declared. "She told me that no one but Jack Halloran took a drink at the girls' apartment the night of the crime," Dr. Catton testified. "She told me that without Jack Halloran there would have been no Ruth Judd case."

Dr. Catton said he tried to get Mrs. Judd to tell him the whole story of the double killing and that she replied she did not see where it would do any good and "would make trouble for others."

STORY OF CHILDREN SOLVES ROBBERIES SHERIFF REVEALS

Confession Accuses Two Held In Jail In Clark County

Solution of numerous chicken robberies, including six in eastern Greene County and two in western Fayette County, over a period of three months, was announced Thursday by Sheriff John Baughn and was the result, the sheriff said, of admissions obtained from the three sons of Ernest Runkle, east of Jamestown, who is being prosecuted in Clark County on a charge of burglary and larceny.

Runkle's three boys, the eldest of whom is 12, were turned over to Fayette County juvenile court authorities after their father and Henry Hopkins were arrested by Greene County authorities some weeks ago for the alleged theft of nearly fifty chickens identified as stolen from a woman near South Charleston.

Runkle and Hopkins were turned over to Clark County for prosecution, and are in jail in default of $2,500 bonds, awaiting grand jury consideration of the burglary charges against them.

Continuing an investigation of other robberies Runkle and Hopkins were suspected of having perpetrated, Sheriff Baughn, assisted by Sheriff Minton, of Fayette County, questioned Runkle's children, who have been placed in a home and are attending school at Washington, C. H.

The boys are said to have confessed that their father and "his crowd" were responsible for a series of chicken thefts in Greene and Fayette Counties. In some of the cases the boys said their father compelled them to accompany him and his associates.

One of the robberies also allegedly cleared up by the statements attributed to the boys was that of the theft of four tires, tubes and wheels from a farm house of Mrs. Andrews, Federal Pike, January 5. The truck had been jacked up and the tires and wheels removed.

Authorities learned Runkle and Hopkins had sold the tires and tubes to Walter Fast, near Darby, O. Pickaway County. Chief Deputy Sheriff Walton Spahr, Sheriff Minton and a deputy sheriff of Pickaway County recovered the stolen tires and tubes, and a search for the missing wheels is still in progress. Fast, and tubes, not knowing they had been stolen.

Several hundred chickens and a quantity of meat comprised the loot obtained in the series of robberies believed solved, according to Sheriff Baughn.

The Yanks, pressing against the rails of the Chaumont on crowded decks, shivered in their overcoats, unaccustomed to the severe cold after the Philippine heat. To their ears came sounds of bursting shells and exploding bombs in the Chinese city, where the battle fury was increasing not a mile away.

French, Italian, British, and Portuguese officers mingled on the dock with waiting United States marine and navy officers in a medley of international uniforms, while up and down the crowded river, liners, freighters, ferryboats, coal barges, Chinese junk, and sampans all pushed and crowded.

FREE EMPLOYMENT BUREAU SET UP HERE TO ASSIST JOBLESS

Creation of a free unemployment bureau for Xenia and Greene County is announced by interested agencies headed by the Xenia Retail Merchants Association.

The bureau will start functioning Monday in offices on the second floor above the Famous Auto Supply Co., W. Main St. Mrs. H. R. Wirthlin, W. Main St., will be in charge of the office.

The bureau was created to coordinate efforts of the merchants association, Foody Post, American Legion, the county commissioners and other agencies to supply Greene County jobless men with positions in public works and other building programs being undertaken.

It will cooperate with contractors and assign them men as needed. Cooperation of contractors of public bridge projects and on building construction at the O. S. and S. O. Home has been promised and the neediest of applicants will be given preference in assigning labor.

Details of the project will be revealed tomorrow in an advertisement published by the retail merchants. The ad will contain a coupon which jobless applicants must fill out giving their name, address, kind of employment desired and other information. Applicants will then file these coupons with the bureau and notify the bureau how they can be called for work.

Miss Henrietta Beard, director of the federated city employment bureau in Dayton, has advised the local agencies in establishing the bureau and will be here Monday to assist in getting it started properly.

Because of scarcity of work jobs will be related among unemployed to give all at least part-time work, it is said.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 5.—Led by Paul Appodaca, an Indian cowboy, a solemn group of men trekked through heavy snow today to take to Bakerfield the eight bodies of victims of the San Francisco-Los Angeles airplane that crashed last Friday at the extreme top of west of Los Angeles.

Appodaca found the burned and crumpled wreckage on a 2,000-foot slope four miles northwest of Lebec yesterday. It had been hidden by snow from the eyes of scores of pilots who had flown overhead.

The body of one of the three women passengers, Mrs. F. H. Pickels, of San Diego, had been thrown twenty feet from the plane. Bodies of the others, charred and mangled, were huddled in the front of the plane. Pilot J. V. Sandblom's body was found crushed and burned under the twisted wreckage of the three motors. He had been flying "blind" in a raging blizzard.

Experts said the eight persons had been killed outright. In addition to Mrs. Pickels, the passengers were the Veteran Chief Deputy Sheriff Frank Dewar of Los Angeles; S. B. Swan, retired New Jersey capitalist; J. H. Polhemus and W. H. Smith, San Francisco business men; Miss Nita McGrath of Berkeley, Cal., and Miss Marie Combs of Hollywood.

Mrs. Rivers, seriously injured, owed her life to the courageous action of Edward Cartain, Buckman Village, Pa.

A. B. Seiden, Houston, was missing.

Among the victims was Captain Joseph Rivers, New York City, who perished trying to save his records.

At least one Japanese plane was brought down, although dozens still are flying through the mists over downtown streets, with heavy bombs visible in the racks under the lower wings, while thousands of faces, white and yellow, are lifted skyward toward the death and destruction hovering above.

No misdirected Japanese bombs landed in the international concession, but Chinese anti-aircraft missiles are falling in neutral territory, sometimes exploding, but more often not.

The Japanese transport ship Mamiya Maru landed 1,000 troops on the south bank of the Yangtze between the Woosung Forts and the village of Paoshan, while another transport steamer, the Kaya Maru, stood by, ready to unload another thousand infantrymen.

ROMANTIC SECRETS TOLD BY PHYSICIAN IN RUTH JUDD TRIAL

Defense To Challenge
Testimony Given By
Psychiatrist

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 5.—Secrets of her love life with J. J. (Happy Jack) Halloran, Phoenix millionaire playboy, bared before a jury, Winnie Ruth Judd, the young wife of a middle aged physician, spent a legal holiday in jail today as her attorneys prepared to challenge the sensational testimony of Dr. Joseph Catton, Stanford University psychiatrist.

Dr. Catton said Ruth, accused of killing Agnes Ann Lerol and Hedvig Samuelson, whose mangled bodies were shipped in trunks from Phoenix to Los Angeles, was sane, and knew the difference between right and wrong.

Dr. Catton in a detailed report of conversations with Ruth inferred she had a "phantom accomplice" in the "double trunk murder." He inferred she was shielding someone else who may have aided her.

Dr. Catton said Ruth admitted her romance with Halloran. "She told me she believed a woman could love two men," he declared.

"She told me that no one but Jack Halloran took a drink at the girls' apartment the night of the crime," Dr. Catton testified. "She told me that without Jack Halloran there would have been no Ruth Judd case."

Dr. Catton said he tried to get Jack Judd to tell him the whole story of the double killing and that she replied she did not see where it would do any good and "would make trouble for others."

Air, land and sea forces all engaged in the fiercest fighting, with the issue still undecided as both belligerents made conflicting claims of victory.

At least one Japanese plane was brought down, although dozens still are flying through the mists over downtown streets, with heavy bombs visible in the racks under the lower wings, while thousands of faces, white and yellow, are lifted skyward toward the death and destruction hovering above.

The menu prepared by Miss Williams before Thursday's audience was as follows: crab meat cocktail, olives, chicken supreme salad, potato chips, sliced tomatoes, Kelvinator biscuits, preserves, apple parfait, Kelvinator cake and coffee.

As a feature of the school interesting prizes were given away including a nine piece set of green glass refrigerator dishes, and the articles of food prepared at the school Thursday afternoon. Souvenirs of demonstration envelopes of recipes and children's puzzles were also distributed.

At Friday afternoon's session Miss Williams was scheduled to talk on "Saving Time in the Kitchen" and was to prepare the following menu: chilled fruit cup, jellied chicken and vegetable, and gratin potatoes, buttered beets, frozen fruit supreme, rolls, jelly, chocolate ice cream and coffee. WILL LET CONTRACT FOR BUILDING ROAD EXTENSION MARCH 4

Contract for paying the two-mile extension of the Xenia-Fairfield Road, extending from a point where the present concrete paving ends, through Osborn to the center of Fairfield is expected to be awarded by the state highway department at a letting scheduled for March 4.

In making this announcement, H. W. Walsh, Greene County's division state highway engineer, reveals that the two-mile portion of the highway to be remodeled has long been incorporated in the state highway system, but steps had never been taken to improve it because of the difficulty encountered in procuring title to sufficient right-of-way from abutting land owners.

Bids will be received, the division engineer said, upon concrete and other types of road construction material. A downhill reverse curve in the road at Reed's hill will be eliminated since the Southwestern Portland Cement Co., Osborn, has granted the state right-of-way to build a new stretch of road through an adjoining quarry.

ALLEGED BOND JUMPER IS AGAIN HELD HERE ON CHECK CHARGE

Apprehended at Cincinnati and brought back to Xenia Thursday afternoon, William H. Deutsch, 31, is being held in jail awaiting arraignment in Common Pleas Court Friday or Saturday on a worthless check charge on which he was indicted by the last October grand jury.

During the last year and a half Deutsch has spent a greater part of his time playing hide and seek with local authorities.

After being sought throughout the state for more than a year on a charge of defrauding James Malavazos, part owner of the Xenia Candy Kitchen, E. Main St., of $1,000 by passing two bogus checks for $500 each, Deutsch was finally arrested at Sandusky, O., and returned to Xenia last August 14. Sandusky police had discovered through fingerprint records the man was wanted in this city.

Arraigned in Municipal Court, Deutsch waived examination and was held to the grand jury under $1,000 bond. After furnishing the required bail, Deutsch was given his liberty and authorities had not been able to locate him since that date.

Steps were about to be taken Thursday to have Deutsch's bail declared forfeit when Xenia police were notified by the Cincinnati detective bureau that the elusive bond jumper was under arrest in that city.

Sheriff John Baughin deputized Oliver Belden, auto club secretary, and Belden, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Forest Shoup went to Cincinnati Thursday and brought Deutsch back to Xenia for prosecution.

The grand jury indicted Deutsch on a charge of giving a worthless check for $500 to Malavazos without having funds on deposit in the First Citizens Trust Co., Columbus, August 30, 1930, and it is on this charge that the alleged check worker is expected to be prosecuted.

In conjunction with the latest search for Deutsch that had been in progress for four months, Police Chief O. H. Cornwell sent more than 400 photographs of the fugitive to police departments and sheriff's offices in all parts of Ohio.

RESEARCH REVEALS ALL-BRAN RICH IN HEALTH-ELEMENTS

Helps Correct Constipation with "Bulk" and Vitamin B; Also Has Iron

Recent scientific research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains two things needed to overcome temporary and recurring constipation. It has "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract.

These two important food-elements promote regular habits, and help do away with the headaches, loss of appetite and energy, so often the result of constipation.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is mild in action—much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable.

Isn't this pleasant "cereal way" far more healthful than using pills and drugs—so often habit-forming?

Just eat two tablespoonsful of Kellogg's daily—enough for most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Besides, ALL-BRAN brings your body twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Equally tasty as a cereal with milk or cream, or used in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

WILL LET CONTRACT FOR BUILDING ROAD EXTENSION MARCH 4

Contract for paying the two-mile extension of the Xenia-Fairfield Road, extending from a point where the present concrete paving ends, through Osborn to the center of Fairfield, is expected to be awarded by the state highway department at a letting scheduled for March 4.

In making this announcement, H. W. Walsh, Greene County's division state highway engineer, reveals that the two-mile portion of the highway to be remodeled has long been incorporated in the state highway system, but steps had never been taken to improve it because of the difficulty encountered in procuring title to sufficient right-of-way from abutting land owners.

Bids will be received, the division engineer said, upon concrete and other types of road construction material. A downhill reverse curve in the road at Reed's hill will be eliminated since the Southwestern Portland Cement Co., Osborn, has granted the state right-of-way to build a new stretch of road through an adjoining quarry.

New Ideas About FAT

Old ideas about excess fat have changed. Science has found a great cause in a weakened gland. Now doctors the world over seek to correct that cause. Fat people are no longer starved.

Marmola prescription tablets have, for 24 years, supplied this modern method to the over-fat. People have used millions of boxes. Now in almost every circle all can see the delightful results of Marmola. Use this right method to reduce. Aim to stop the fat formation, then aid Nature to remove it. Ask your druggist for Marmola. Read the book in the box to know how and why it acts. Stop when your weight returns to normal and your vim comes back. Don't keep this blight and burden. Start Marmola now.

BUSINESS RECOVERY IN 1932

The public hysteria that followed the first decline in business from what might be termed the "golden age" has been followed by a saner viewpoint that has brought to light many interesting facts.

Business statisticians tell us that periods of peaks and valleys in business have always followed each other. Business declines coming with regularity cause upheavals that upset national conditions.

It is interesting to discover a parallel between the post-war depression year of 1921, and the depression of 1931. Incidents in these years parallel each other with marked similarity.

In the fall of 1921 the bonus measure was dropped by Congress and in 1931, veterans voted against a bonus demand. A tariff increase was dropped in 1921 paralleled by increasing sentiment for downward tariff revision in 1931.

In 1921 the pound sterling was at $3.57 and money at 4 1/2 per cent while in 1931 the pound sterling was $3.90 and money at 3 1/2 per cent. A decade ago Chairman Gary, of the U. S. Steel Corporation, said: "Most steel manufacturers are selling below cost of production," and President Farrell, in 1931 said: "It is no honor for us to sell steel below cost."

Dun's commodity index for the last four months of 1931 shows prices are stable, while they showed a low in the same period of 1921. The steel industry in 1921 reached a low ebb of 20 per cent of capacity and at the close of 1931 was at 28 per cent of capacity.

Ten years ago the German mark was declining while now Germany is struggling to reorganize its financial structure. Silver prices rose during both periods and the estimate of unemployed for both was practically the same. Panic selling of securities drove the Dow-Jones average down during both periods.

But — in late 1921 the stock market, in the face of these events, experienced a sustained advance, which was only interrupted by technical reactions, until 1929.

Now business statisticians and others agree that the peak of the depression has been reached, and that the back of the slump is broken and recovery which was so apparent in 1922, will be repeated in 1932.

AN OLD BELIEF

Many citizens laughed merrily recently, in tune to the low moans of cool dealers and others who grieved because there was no sun so the legendary ground hog could see his shadow. If he could have, it would have meant six weeks more of winter, or perhaps simply six weeks of winter.

Down in Washington the National Geographic Society sniffed scornfully and made an assertion which struck at the very roots of our naive belief in the ground hog's infallibility as a weather prophet. It declared that no ground hog has ever been seen earlier than mid-February in any part of the United States. Right this minute he is still slumbering sweetly. He never had any intention of bestirring himself just to show a lot of silly humans that it would, or would not, be safe to think of putting the fur coat back in storage.

The Society also adds on a low note that if this prophetic function is taken from Master Ground Hog, he stands as a fairly worthless member of society. It says that his meat is inedible, his fur worthless and his gastronomic habits a great annoyance to farmers and gardeners.

The fabled value of the ground hog, or woodchuck, as a prognosticator arose in the early days when pioneers had the wisdom to take from the behavior of wild animals some hints for their own protection. Nature is on the side of her own, and it was good sense for the first settlers to read Nature's signs.

But for ourselves there is no need to implore meteorological stations to toss their charts and instruments out of the window each year and import supplies of ground hogs for February 2, however much we call the date "Ground Hog Day."

Adjust Mode Of Living

By IGNACE JAN PADEREWSKI
Musician and Former Premier of Poland

Ignace Jan Paderewski, world known musician, was born in the province of Podolia, Russian Poland, Nov. 6, 1860. He began to learn the piano at the age of three, and at seven was placed under a teacher. At eighteen he became a teacher at the Conservatory, in Warsaw. He studied with some of the greatest musicians. His own talent developing, he himself was hailed in every country. It is generally conceded that Paderewski is the greatest pianist in the world. He is now making a tour to a few American cities, where thousands vainly try to hear him, being unable to crowd into the concert halls. A number of his concerts being given for the relief of unemployed, Paderewski turns over all the proceeds for that cause. Paderewski devoted his time mainly to performing concerts for the benefit of Polish war sufferers and to public speaking on behalf of Poland.

In 1917 he was officially recognized as a representative of the Polish people in Washington, and in 1919-20 was Premier of Poland. He was a member of the Peace Conference in Paris and first delegate of Poland to the Council of Ambassadors and to the League of Nations, in 1920.

What brought on the economic crisis? The vanity of the rich placed emphasis on a display of luxury. The poor longed to emulate this display. And the rich sought to make capital of this spirit of envy by encouraging customers to buy on the installment plan. Thereupon people began mortgaging their whole lives.

People who had fought and sacrificed for liberty had unconsciously allowed themselves to become enslaved in another way. They had become slaves to the artificial things of life—habits, conventions and a lavish mode of living which they had come to regard as indispensable to well-being. Their cars, their radios, their jewelry, ever their clothes were bought on the system of deferred payments. It became a habit with them to live beyond their resources, and when the crisis arose they were unable to meet their obligations.

The installment plan, I believe, is one of the main roots of our economic disorder. It lured the manufacturer who devised it into overproduction until they sustained tremendous losses, and hundreds of factories collapsed the world over. Our standard of living had reached too high a level before the reaction set in. Life was too complex.

I believe the solution lies in a simpler form of living. We must reconcile ourselves to what has happened and adjust ourselves to a new mode of living, one in which there is less luxury but more stability. Everywhere there has been a tendency to abandon the soil and flock to the cities. In time people may come to realize that the country offers a happier existence than complex city life. They may want to return to their farms, but then perhaps it will be too late.

As to music, I would at any time advise only the really talented to make it a profession. At the same time, I believe there should be a more general study of music. It should be regarded less professionally and made educationally. It should be a factor in all general education, just as it was in ancient Greece, where children were obliged to study it as part of school life. It should be looked on as a factor in the lives of all people, a great developing influence, not as something set apart for the few who are exceptionally endowed.

At present there is no denying that music is suffering. Music schools that were once prosperous are now depleted of students. Private teachers have lost many pupils. Musicians have been thrown out of employment in great numbers by the radio and the sound even working in shops and as laborers. I doubt if any other field has been so seriously affected in proportion to the number in it.

MY NEW YORK

NEW YORK—Marginalia of a Manhattanite: It's odd how bright the sunlight can be in Fifth Avenue on clear days. . . . Maybe it's the top hats. . . . Saw Bert Lyell in one of those the other morning. What is it about Bert's mouth that is unforgettable? . . . Weakness or strength, as the physiologists term such quirks? . . . I can never remember exactly how Miriam Hopkins looks, either ten minutes after I have seen her.

How quickly even best-selling novels get out of print. . . . Tried to locate one of Scott Fitzgerald's books the other day, but none of the big book stores could find it. . . . Somerset Maugham said that it didn't matter much what any author said, because his volume was utterly dead in ninety days, at the outside.

Philip Barry's new play, "The Animal Kingdom" is a smash. . . . Ward Greene, who wrote "Weep No More," just out, said yesterday morning: "I don't see why the critics took Barry's play with such long faces. . . . It's just the old fable, presented with charm, of the husband, and the wife and the other woman." Aren't they all?

It was after the last supper show this side of Harlem had closed, in one of the eating places where the Broadway crowd gathers. The paragraphs were there in force, and so were the major and petty racketeers. Some of the Park Avenue crowd were sprinkled about, and the showgirls who didn't care about sleep, which it would be impossible to get enough of now and make the matinee "this afternoon."

A thin, pasty-faced young man with a hurt look in his eyes paused at our table and spoke to the theater man with me. Briefly, and then went on. My companion shrugged.

"Just a hanger-on, a chiseler, a dead-beat. He could be one of the best boys in the racket, but he's got an idea he wants to be an architect. Wasting his time at night school and bumming meals off of big-time night club owners, who used to have hopes for him." Again, maybe he's the smartest of them all.

CANDID CAMERAMAN

It is well known that Bobby Jones, world's only quadruple golf champion, just won't stunt for the camera. He'll walk, putt or point, but he refuses to take poses or be guilty of the slightest publicity posing. If this peculiarity is as true as reported, Bobby is very nearly unique in it.

It happens that he is president of the Augusta National Golf Club, which is building his "ideal" course at Augusta. Recently, during a warm day in January, Bobby was on a tour of inspection of the course, followed by a determined photographer, one Mr. Tony Sheehan.

For several hours Sheehan had tried to grab some unusual shots of Jones. The idea was to catch him in a different posture—anything with a kick. They chased over gullies, fallen trees and rough country, until the bulb-squeezer could stand it no longer. His collar melted, he puffed and perspired.

Baby's Cry Unchanged If Frightened, Hurt, Or Hungry, Tests Prove

By CHARLES E. STEWART

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Division Parental Education,
Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

"That is a cry of pain," says grandmother. "If you listen to the cries of as many babies as I have you will be able to know when the baby is suffering from colic, when he is hungry or frightened, or when he is merely crying to be taken up."

Dr. Mandel Sherman, a careful investigator, set out to study the meaning of the infant's cry. He reports his experiment in that interesting book, "The Process of Human Behavior," which his wife, also a scientist of note, helped him write.

Infants between 112 and 100 hours old were employed in the study. Medical students and student nurses were selected as observers.

The infant was suddenly dropped on a pillow (pain), pricked with a needle (fear), deprived of food for thirty minutes past feeding time (hunger), or held with its head restrained (anger).

The observers did not know which sort of stimuli was used: whether the baby was dropped, pricked with a needle, deprived of food, or had its head restrained. They were to judge the type of emotion revealed by each crying child.

"In order that the judgment should be based on the quality of the cry and not upon its duration, the infants were removed from the room after about two minutes, unless the cry subsided in a shorter time." To quote further:

"Ten different emotions were named for the responses to four types of stimuli, the most frequent being colic, hunger, pain and anger. For the cry following a delayed feeding period, only six observers named hunger, and five gave the same name to the reaction following a needle prick. Fear was named only once as characterizing the cry which followed dropping. For the cry following restraint of the head, presumably arousing anger, only two named anger, four naming fear and five pain. For the cry following pricking with a needle five named pain, but an equal number named hunger. There is thus little relation between judgments of the emotional character of an infant's crying and the emotion generally expected to result from a given type of stimulation.

"Although most mothers believe that they can recognize the emotional character of the cry of their infants, they probably base their decisions upon a knowledge of the causative conditions producing the infant's reaction rather than upon the quality of the cry. The mother first looks at her child to see whether he is hurt in any way, then she looks for pins which may be sticking him, looks at his clothing to see if it is too tight, and then perhaps observes the time of day to decide whether he is hungry.

"In young infants the character of the cry during an emotional reaction is thus dependent not so much upon the type of emotional response as upon the character of the stimulating conditions arousing the reaction. In older infants and children, however, an additional factor is introduced which aids the parent in recognizing the emotional character of their cry. It becomes fairly definite in some situations, and the parent associates a given cry with a specific stimulus and attributes it to that stimulus."

I should like to know what the average reader of this column thinks of Dr. Sherman's conclusions.

Budgets For The Entire Family

By MRS. MARY MORTON

This form is a record of income. At the top of the columns write in the source from which the income is received, using as many columns as the various sources of income make necessary. After "Estimates for month" enter the amount which it is expected will be received from each source, and also the estimated total. These figures will all be transferred from the form in the first figure illustrated a few days ago and titled "Estimate of income."

As income is received, write in the date and any description that may seem necessary, and enter the amount received in the column under the proper head. When the account is started, cash on hand should be included in the total for the first month. Do not include it in the total for the following months, though it may be entered in a column on this page so that the amount of cash on hand may be known for each month.

Total the income received during the month, transfer the total to the summary (a page ruled like the form in the second figure illustrated, Estimate of Expenditures and Income), draw a line across the page, and write in the estimates and then the entries for next month immediately below it. Use as many pages or cards as are necessary for the year.

Financial Terms You Should Know
Annual Interest: Interest paid once a year. Investments which assure of interest being paid only once a year are not considered as desirable as those on which interest is paid every three or six months.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Ways of Serving

There are many ways of serving gingerbread. One delicious way is to top with whipped cream, over which is shaved maple sugar. Or maple syrup or sugar folded into whipped cream and served on ginger bread is equally tasty.

Topping with whipped cream in which grated American cheese has been melted is another way of serving.

Grated orange or lemon peel added to whipped cream served with gingerbread is a combination we have mentioned frequently. Make a syrup of one-half cup of brown sugar and one-half cup of water. Cook quartered apples a few minutes in this syrup, then line the greased pan with them and pour the gingerbread over them. This gives an unusual flavor to the popular upside down cake.

How Nature Makes Voice

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

This article might have been called "How to be an actor," but the thought of what the consequences might be prevents one from going on in that vein.

A nose and throat specialist who has been particularly interested in studying and helping singers and actors, gave me this material. Now that so many people want to go in the talkies his work has increased many fold.

A great voice depends on the proper use of many anatomical structures. Very slight things can interrupt a promising career by spoiling a voice. And one of the most important things for a beginner is to know exactly what his own vocal organs are best adapted for.

Good vocal teachers never pay too much attention to the ambitions of a young vocalist. Many tenors desire to be baritones (and who will blame them). But the intelligent vocal teacher, after proper study and consultation with a competent laryngologist, will take them into a room, lock the door, and quietly break the news to them: "They will never be anything but tenors. No matter what the other teachers say. 'The law of nature is inexorable. A professor can be wrong, but nature never.'"

The singing voice is made up of four factors:
1. Bellows
2. Vibrators
3. Resonators
4. Determinators

The bellows are the lungs, the vocal cords and the larynx; the vibrators, the resonators, the air spaces or sinuses in the head, as well as the buccal and nasal cavities, and the determinators are the ears.

All these structures must be examined by the physician who acts as advisor to the ambitious singer. If he finds them all sound and free from disease, the vocal teacher then decides what the voice is fitted for, in what register it is most at home, how true the ear is musically, etc.

Many singers, actors and actresses, as well as public speakers, and others who use the voice a great deal in the course of their work suffer a handicap, according to my informant, from infected lingual tonsils. These tonsils are part of the great ring of lymphatic tissue around the back of the throat which includes the more familiar faucial tonsils and the adenoids. The lingual tonsils are at the base of the tongue and are not often removed in ordinary tonsil operations (as is proper). But if they become inflamed or irritated they can cause a singer a great deal of trouble. They lie just above or over the voice box. Many cases of persistent hoarseness are due to their infection and enlargement.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

A. J. T.: "What is the cause of a person's tongue turning black and having hair on it?"

Answer: Black tongue is a very rare condition, and may be due to local irritants or certain mouth washes. Sometimes certain fungi grow on the tongue producing the hair-like filaments described. True black tongue is due to an increase of the horny cells and is probably hereditary in character. In treatment, tobacco should be stopped, and it has been advised to paint the surface of the tongue with a 2 to 5 per cent gentian violet solution. The tendency is to the condition to clear up in the course of time.

Maid Years For Mate

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

One gets the impression now and then that the modern maiden doesn't care a hang about being married. A good weekly or monthly pay envelope, an apartment with another girl where they can entertain friends of both sexes, and a carefree bachelor life—that suits the up-to-date girl down to her toes. No messy housework and squalling babies for her.

But then along comes a letter like the following and one's theories are all knocked into a cocked hat. Underneath all their independence and efficiency, the same old Mother Eve longs for her Adam, for the shelter of a home and babies to love.

"DEAR MISS LEE: I am a young woman 25 years, five feet three inches tall, passable in looks, have quite a good education, do not smoke, drink or pet, very good reputation; am just about the average young woman of today—except I'm still single. Why?"

"I have traveled quite extensively during the last eight years; been engaged twice, yet it never took. And here I find myself at 25 all alone—no one to love—no one to look forward to at night when I come home from work. It's heart breaking."

"Miss Lee, there is nothing I want more in life than a husband, a home and babies. But apparently no man seems to think enough of me to ask me to share his future with him. Why? JEANNA."

These long distance diagnoses are not very satisfactory, I am afraid, Jeanna. If I could observe your actions and speeches for a few days I might be better able to tell you where the trouble lay.

You may be too anxious, you know. Quite unconsciously your eyes, your whole manner may say to the men of your acquaintance: "I'm just dying to annex one of you."

Or so urgent is your desire that you may try to conceal it and so appear to be the "proud young beauty" who has no use for the sterner sex.

The very best thing you can do is to fill your life with other things—music, art, study of various kinds. Make yourself as independent of others as possible. You would find many disappointments, even if you married. Your husband and babies would fail to fill your whole life to always understand, and there would be times you would feel very much alone. So learn to live your own life—to stand on your own feet.

You are young. There are years ahead of you before you need feel you are "on the shelf." In fact no woman need feel that in these days. You may meet your mate any day, so buck up and be gay and busy—and, even if you never have the husband, home and babies you crave, you will get much out of life. And there are plenty of babies who need mothers, too, which is another thought. Trying to give a little mother love to one of them would help make your life worthwhile.

MOLLY: Sorry, but I cannot give you any help.

FRANKIE: Invite boy number two for the party.

Toe Out And You Waddle

By GLADYS GLAD

A woman's face may be her fortune—but whether it's going to prove her good fortune or her misfortune is something that depends a great deal upon herself. For even if, despite her best efforts, it inclines naturally toward the "misfortune" side, she can do a great deal to change all that by cultivating a little skill in the use of cosmetics.

I am inclined to believe that most errors in make-up are committed by older women than by younger ones. And it is in the selection of the proper shades of cosmetics mostly, that these errors are made. Competition among the younger folks is keen, and it's a dull girl who doesn't quickly learn what shades of make-up best suit her type and coloring.

But maturity must forego a good many of the privileges allotted to youth. And the older woman must tone down that vivid make-up that looked so bright and attractive on her face when she was younger. She must strive for softness of line. And she must be sparing with her make-up. For a lavish, vivid make-up will not only fail to conceal her age, but will actually accentuate it, emphasizing whatever hard lines there are in her face.

The skin of maturity always is somewhat darker than the skin of youth. A note of blue creeps into the complexion and into the lips. Hence, if a natural effect is to be gained (and one must always strive for naturalness in make-up), a darker powder must be used and a rouge with a different basic tint. The rouge must generally have a hint of blue in it, to reflect the natural bluish-red tones that appear in the mature skin. It must not be applied lavishly, in the careless fashion of youth. It must be blended lightly on the cheeks and the edges delicately blurred.

so that there are no obvious lines of demarcation.

And the lipstick must be applied sparingly, so that the mouth remains soft-looking and does not give the face an appearance of hardness.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Eyeshadow

B. B. T.: You may use the blue, the blue-gray, or the gray eyeshadow cream as you prefer. It is best to use the blue for evening wear only.

Complexion

Wendy: It would be impossible for me to print my method of clearing the skin of blackheads, pimples, and enlarged pores in this small space. The process, however, is fully outlined in my "Beauty Culture" booklet.

Warts

Jenny C.: Warts are caused by skin infections. It is dangerous for an amateur to try to remove them. See a skin specialist about them.

Reducing

Anna: The reducing course outlined in my booklet on "The New Figure" has indeed been proved safe and effective. It is guaranteed to take off 8 to 10 pounds in two weeks.

The earliest glove makers in history were the monks under Charlemagne who were granted the unrestricted right of hunting in return for making gloves, girdles and covers from the skins of the deer they killed.

BUSINESS RECOVERY IN 1932

The public hysteria that followed the first decline in business from what might be termed the "golden age" has been followed by a saner viewpoint that has brought to light many interesting facts.

Business statisticians tell us that periods of peaks and valleys in business have always followed each other. Business declines coming with regularity cause upheavals that upset national conditions.

It is interesting to discover a parallel between the post-war depression year of 1921, and the depression of 1931. Incidents in these years parallel each other with marked similarity.

In the fall of 1921 the bonus measure was dropped by Congress and in 1931, veterans voted against a bonus demand. A tariff increase was dropped in 1921 paralleled by increasing sentiment for downward tariff revision in 1931.

In 1921 the pound sterling was at $3.57 and money at 4 1/4 per cent while in 1931 the pound sterling was $3.90 and money at 3 1/2 per cent. A decade ago Chairman Gary, of the U. S. Steel Corporation, said: "Most steel manufacturers are selling below cost of production," and President Farrell, in 1931 said: "It is no honor for us to sell steel below cost."

Dun's commodity index for the last four months of 1931 shows prices are stable, while they showed a gain in the same period of 1921. The steel industry in 1921 reached a low ebb of 20 per cent of capacity and at the close of 1931 was at 28 per cent of capacity.

Ten years ago the German mark was declining while now Germany is struggling to reorganize its financial structure. Silver prices rose during both periods and the estimate of unemployed for both was practically the same. Panic selling of securities drove the Dow Jones average down during both periods.

But — in late 1921 the stock market, in the face of these events, experienced a sustained advance, which was only interrupted by technical reactions, until 1929.

Now business statisticians and others agree that the peak of the depression has been reached, and that the back of the slump is broken and recovery which was so apparent in 1922, will be repeated in 1932.

AN OLD BELIEF

Many citizens laughed merrily recently, in tune to the low moans of cool dealers and others who grieved because there was no sun so the legendary ground hog could see his shadow. If he could have, it would have meant six weeks more of winter, or perhaps simply six weeks of winter.

Down in Washington the National Geographic Society sniffed scornfully and made an assertion which struck at the very roots of our naive belief in the ground hog's infallibility as a weather prophet. It declared that no ground hog has ever been seen earlier than mid-February in any part of the United States. Right this minute he is still slumbering sweetly. He never had any intention of bestirring himself just to show a lot of silly humans that it would, or would not, be safe to think of putting the fur coat back in storage.

The Society also adds on a low note that if this prophetic function is taken from Master Ground Hog, he stands as a fairly worthless member of society. It says that his meat is inedible, his fur worthless and his gastronomic habits a great annoyance to farmers and gardeners.

The fabled value of the ground hog, or woodchuck, as a prognosticator arose in the early days when pioneers had the wisdom to take from the behavior of wild animals some hints for their own protection. Nature is on the side of her own, and it was good sense for the first settlers to read Nature's signs.

But for ourselves there is no need to implore meteorological stations to toss their charts and instruments out of the window each year and import supplies of ground hogs for February 2, however much we call the date "Ground Hog Day."

Adjust Mode Of Living

By IGNACE JAN PADEREWSKI

Musician and Former Premier of Poland

Ignace Jan Paderewski, world known musician, was born in the province of Podolia, Russian Poland, Nov. 6, 1860. He began to learn the piano at the age of three, and at seven was placed under a teacher. At eighteen he became a teacher at the Conservatory, in Warsaw. He studied with some of the greatest musicians. His own talent developing, he himself was hailed in every country. It is generally conceded that Paderewski was the greatest pianist in the world. He is now making a tour to a few American cities, where thousands vainly try to hear him, being unable to crowd into the concert halls. A number of his concerts being given for the relief of unemployed, Paderewski turns over all the proceeds for that cause. Paderewski devoted his time mainly to performing concerts for the benefit of Polish war sufferers and to public speaking on behalf of Poland. In 1917 he was officially recognized as a representative of the Polish people in Washington, and in 1919-20 was Premier of Poland. He was a member of the Peace Conference in Paris and first delegate of Poland to the Council of Ambassadors and to the League of Nations, in 1920.

What brought on the economic crisis? The vanity of the rich placed emphasis on a display of luxury. The poor longed to emulate this display. And merchants sought to make capital of this spirit of envy by encouraging customers to buy on the installment plan. Thereupon people began mortgaging their whole lives.

People who had fought and sacrificed for liberty had unconsciously allowed themselves to become enslaved in another way. They had become slaves to the artificial things of life—habits, conventions and a lavish mode of living which they had come to regard as indispensable to well-being. Their cars, their radios, their jewelry, even their clothes were bought on the system of deferred payments. It became a habit with them to live beyond their resources, and when the crisis arose they were unable to meet their obligations.

The installment plan, I believe, is one of the main roots of our economic disorder. It lured the manufacturers who devised it into overproduction until they sustained tremendous losses, and hundreds of factories collapsed the world over. Our standard of living had reached too high a level before the reaction set in. Life was too complex.

I believe the solution lies in a simpler form of living. We must reconcile ourselves to what has happened and adjust ourselves to a new mode of living, one in which there is less luxury, but more stability. Everywhere there has been a tendency to abandon the soil and flock to the cities. In time people may come to realize that the country offers a happier existence than complex city life. They may want to return to their farms, but then perhaps it will be too late.

Infants between 112 and 160 hours old were employed in the study. Medical students and student nurses were selected as observers.

The infant was suddenly dropped on a pillow (fear), pricked with a needle (pain), deprived of food for thirty minutes past feeding time (hunger), or held with its head restrained (anger).

The observers did not know which sort of stimuli was used: whether the baby was dropped, pricked with a needle, deprived of food, or had its head restrained. They were to judge the type of emotion revealed by each crying child.

"In order that the judgment should be based on the quality of the cry, and not upon its duration, the infants were removed from the room after about two minutes, unless the cry subsided in a shorter time." To quote further:

"Ten different emotions were named for the responses to four types of stimuli, the most frequent being colic, hunger, pain and anger. For the cry following a delayed feeding period, only six observers named hunger, and five gave the same name to the reaction following a needle prick. Fear was named only once as characterizing the cry which followed dropping. For the cry following restraint of the head, presumably anger, only two named anger, four naming fear and five pain. Now that "Hack" Wilson, traded by the Chicago Cubs to the St. Louis Cardinals and then passed on to the Brooklyn Dodgers, has come to a salary agreement for 1932, signing a one-year contract for $16,500, the pudgy outfielder promises that the Brooklyn investment will yield big dividends.

"It doesn't matter where I play in 1932, I will guarantee to give my best all the time." This was the statement attributed to the 1930 National League home run king before he was traded to Brooklyn.

"So far as 1931 was concerned—well I didn't get any of the best of it in any descriptions of what I was doing, or didn't do," added Hack.

"I batted pretty well when Joe McCarthy was managing me, but not so well under Rogers Hornsby's leadership. Some say that the latter failure indicates that I'm not as good as I was. I'd like to say that the batting instructions by Joe were different than those of Rogers and if I will be allowed to hit like Joe let me hit I guess I can do pretty good."

"It was all right with Joe for me to hit when the count was three and one. When it's that way the pitcher is in the hole. He must put over a good one. So I'd always know the pitch would be accurate and I'd take a cut at it and had lots of good luck."

"Rogers had it figured that it was best for me to let the next pitch slip over in the hope that it would be bad. If it was good—and usually such throws are—it would be three and two, and the advantage I had over the pitcher would be gone."

"If my best manager will let me take a poke at the ball whenever I figure it good, I am sure I'll get plenty of hits."

If, as has been said, travel broadens one, the Cincinnati Reds ought to see plenty of "America first" in 1932. It has been figured out that the Redlegs will travel 12,763 miles in playing the away-from-home games on their schedule. Their railroad mileage is an increase of 300 miles over 1931. The schedule-makers have allotted the Reds seventeen home Sunday games besides the Labor Day holiday. Knowing President Sidney Weil's passion for artificial double-headers as "dollar pullers," it is reasonable to suppose there will be an abundance of Sunday double bills.

That new golf ball has added yards upon yards to his drives, asserts Francis Ouimet, national amateur champion. The ball, he says, rides much smoother in the wind, and seems to have solved one of golf's problems. In fact, the ball seems to have met the approval of many other veterans of the game, who have given it a fair trial and appear equally satisfied with the marked improvement over the old pellet. For our part, we are easily pleased, and the size, shape and weight of the ball makes little difference in our game, which has always been in such a state.

MERCHANTS LOSE TO WASHINGTON TEAM

Victims of some uncanny basket shooting from long range in the last few minutes of play, the Jamestown Merchants lost to the Washington C. H. Paint and Glass Co. team, a collection of ex-high school stars, 27 to 19 at the Y. M. C. A. in Washington C. H. Thursday night. Jamestown cagers trailed at the half, 11 to 7, but rallied and were leading by a small margin when Berley, Washington forward, got busy and sank four straight baskets in quick succession from mid-floor in the ebbing moments of the contest. Battle on the Barge

Flood's "Light Snack"

WITH THE fight due to start soon, John Flood had to have a last "light snack." And while his trainer raved and begged him to stop, Sullivan's opponent virtually gorged himself with two pounds of steak. Sullivan ate, too, for there was really no assurance as to how long they would have to wait before the battle could begin. But John L., at this stage of his career was a careful athlete, ate very lightly.

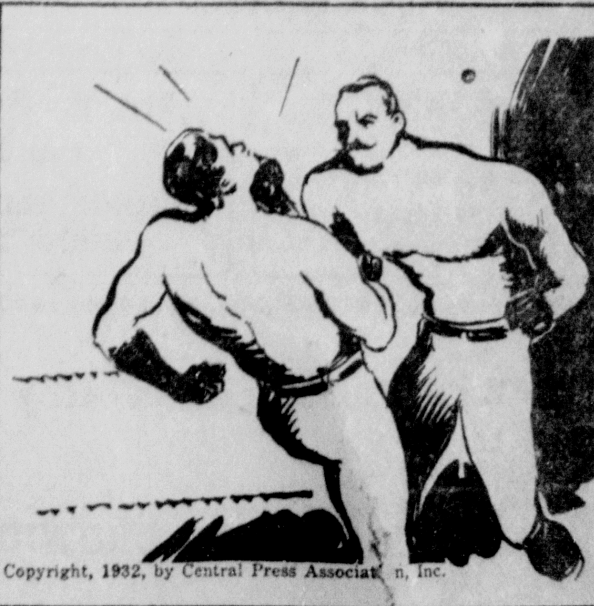

John L., Flood Shake Hands

WHEN THE two men entered the ring on the barge it was announced the fight was to be under London prize ring rules. John L. won the toss for corners and chose the west side so the sun would be in his opponent's eyes. In Flood's corner crouched Barney Aaron and Sam Hurst, able seconds. In Sullivan's corner was Manager Billy Madden and Joe Goss, the former champion, who was helping his old foe.

The First Knockdown

The fighters donned skin-tight gloves. Referee Al Smith gave the signal and the two men rushed out of their corners. Twice John L. fainted and Flood ducked. The second time John L. landed a right uppercut. Flood clinched. Sullivan hammered a hard left and a hard right flush to the stomach. Flood dropped on his right knee which, under the rules, ended the first round. It was all Sullivan so far.

End of Fifth Round

AFTER a few minutes rest the battle resumed. Flood was more aggressive but Sullivan continued hammering at that overloaded stomach and heart. Flood won the second round. The next two were fairly even with John L. continuing his merciless assault on Flood's midriff. In the fifth stanza John L. switched his attack. A right uppercut floored Flood in 30 seconds.

Now that "Hack" Wilson, traded by the Chicago Cubs to the St. Louis Cardinals and then passed on to the Brooklyn Dodgers, has come to a salary agreement for 1932, signing a one-year contract for $16,500, the pudgy outfielder promises that the Brooklyn investment will yield big dividends.

"It doesn't matter where I play in 1932, I will guarantee to give my best all the time." This was the statement attributed to the 1930 National League home run king before he was traded to Brooklyn.

"So far as 1931 was concerned—I didn't get any of the best of it in any descriptions of what I was doing, or didn't do," added Hack.

"I batted pretty well when Joe McCarthy was managing me, but not so well under Rogers Hornsby's leadership. Some say that the latter failure indicates that I'm not as good as I was. I'd like to say that the batting instructions by Joe were different than those of Rogers and if I will be allowed to hit like Joe let me hit I guess I can do pretty good."

"It was all right with Joe for me to hit when the count was three and one. When it's that way the pitcher is in the hole. He must put over a good one. So I'd always know the pitch would be accurate and I'd take a cut at it and had lots of good luck."

"Rogers had it figured that it was best for me to let the next pitch slip over in the hope that it would be bad. If it was good—and usually such throws are—it would be three and two, and the advantage I had over the pitcher would be gone."

"If my best manager will let me take a poke at the ball whenever I figure it good, I am sure I'll get plenty of hits."

If, as has been said, travel broadens one, the Cincinnati Reds ought to see plenty of "America first" in 1932. It has been figured out that the Redlegs will travel 12,763 miles in playing the away-from-home games on their schedule. Their railroad mileage is an increase of 300 miles over 1931. The schedule-makers have allotted the Reds seventeen home Sunday games besides the Labor Day holiday. Knowing President Sidney Weil's passion for artificial double-headers as "dollar pullers," it is reasonable to suppose there will be an abundance of Sunday double bills.

That new golf ball has added yards upon yards to his drives, asserts Francis Outmet, national amateur champion. The ball, he says, rides much smoother in the wind, and seems to have solved one of golf's problems. In fact, the ball seems to have met the approval of many other veterans of the game, who have given it a fair trial and appear equally satisfied with the marked improvement over the old pellet. For our part, we are easily pleased, and the size, shape and weight of the ball makes little difference in our game, which has always been in such a state.

MERCHANTS LOSE TO WASHINGTON TEAM

Victims of some uncanny basket shooting from long range in the last few minutes of play, the Jamestown Merchants lost to the Washington G. H. Jamestown cagers trailed at the half, 11 to 7, but rallied and were leading by a small margin when Berley, Washington forward, got busy and sank four straight baskets in quick succession from mid-floor in the ebbing moments of the contest. The Trojans, having given the Miamisburg quintet its first defeat, will attempt to bring Greenville down to earth. Xenia Central's quintet, which has been having more "downs" than it has had "ups" this season, will attempt to end its losing ways at the expense of Fairview at Dayton. Fairview has lost the two league games it has played by close scores to Greenville and Piqua.

VERY RUN DOWN CONDITION
"I was in a highly nervous condition for 3 or 4 years. I could not sleep at night, had no appetite, and was in a VERY RUN DOWN CONDITION. TONGEE was recommended to me so I decided to give it a trial. I have taken several bottles and feel better than I have for years. My appetite is fine, nervousness is gone and I sleep like a top. I highly recommend TONGEE to any one who needs a good system builder."

Mr. Jos. Keeshan of Norwood, wrote that about TONGEE. GENERAL FATIGUE—lack of ambition or desire to do or participate in anything is a sure sign of a run-down condition, which brings on fatigue and weariness easily. The entire system needs bolstering up and vitality and strength restored. TONGEE—the Proven Medicine will do it. Get the facts about this medicine today. Visit DONGES, The Druggist.

Battle on the Barge

Flood's "Light Snack"

John L. Flood Shake Hands

The First Knockdown
End of Fifth Round
AFTER a few minutes rest the battle resumed. Flood was more aggressive but Sullivan continued hammering at that overloaded stomach and heart. Flood won the second round. The next two were fairly even with John L. continuing his merciless assault on Flood's midriff. In the fifth stanza John L. switched his attack. A right uppercut floored Flood in 30 seconds.

CAPTAIN HAYS HEADS XENIA'S GEORGE WASHINGTON PROGRAM

Captain Harold L. Hays, superintendent of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, was elected general chairman of the Xenia George Washington Bi-Centennial Memorial Commission at a dinner-meeting of representatives of patriotic and civic organizations at the Frances Inn Thursday night.

S. V. Cox, who has been appointed executive secretary for Greene County by the national memorial commission, was elected secretary of the Xenia commission and L. N. Shephard, was elected treasurer.

SEVEN MORE ENLIST IN NATIONAL GUARD HERE; MEET MONDAY

Seven more recruits have been added to the roster of Company L, 147th, Infantry, Ohio National Guard, which will hold its first drill at the armory Monday night at 7 o'clock.

Enlistments now total nearly fifty as the intensive drive to reorganize the personnel of the company nears fulfillment, giving additional assurance that the unit will not be removed from Xenia.

The latest new members to enroll are Irvin Hymann, Andrew H. Frazer, John C. Maxwell, John W. Collins, William E. Ellisberry, Francis A. Dalton and Eugene O. Randall.

All of the recruits are expected to be present at the armory for the initial drill Monday night. Uniforms will be issued them at this time.

Thirteen or fourteen more enlistments must be procured in order that the company may be recruited to its proper strength, and it is hoped the additional members needed will be obtained by Monday evening. Now that the company roster is almost complete, little difficulty is anticipated in obtaining a sufficient number of recruits to bring the unit up to the required standard.

More than twenty representatives of various organizations were guests of Foody Post, American Legion, at the dinner. Paul Halder, commander of Foody Post, opened the business meeting and Dr. H. C. Messenger served as temporary chairman until the selection of permanent officers.

Mr. Cox explained the purposes of the commission and how it would operate to guarantee observance of the Washington anniversary during the period from February 22 to November 26. Various days of patriotic nature will be assigned for individual celebration programs by the interested organizations.

Until Washington's Birthday, Foody Post is in charge of the program and has arranged for a dinner that day observing the event of a special American Legion edition of the Gazette, filled with information on Washington and the celebration program, will be published that day.

Captain Hays asked the cooperation of all members of the commission in planning fitting observance of the period. The first bi-centennial commission medal received in Greene County from the national commission, was presented by Commander Halder to Mrs. A. C. Messenger, vice state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Similar medals will be given all commission members later.

Appointments in keeping with the George Washington nature of the meeting, were used as table decorations for the dinner.

FLUE BURNS OUT

Responding to the eighth alarm of the year, firemen were called at 8:20 o'clock Thursday night to the residence of George P. Tiffany, 216 W. Second St., when a chimney flue burned out. No damage was caused.

CHURCH WILL HEAR PROGRAM BY RADIO

An unusual program is being planned at the New Jasper M. E. Church Sunday morning when members and friends of the church will be given an opportunity to hear a special program broadcast from WLW, Cincinnati, from 10 to 10:30 a. m. A radio will be placed in the church special for the occasion.

The program will consist of music by the Jubilee Singers of Henderson Settlement and the Kingdom Come male quartet, Henderson Settlement and Kingdom Come are settlements where the Methodist Church is doing home mission work in the southern part of Kentucky. The work that the church is doing in these places will be reflected in the programs of the young men and women Sunday.

CHAPTER 41

MARCIA went home with Connie Deitz on the following evening. They walked on Thirty-fourth street to Sixth avenue, and took the elevated uptown. The train was so crowded that Marcia wondered how one more human being could be wedged into the writhing, swaying, strap-hanging mass, but every one seemed to take it as an everyday occurrence, so she concluded that it must be. This, then, was not a special occasion when all the people in New York had tried to crowd into one train. She was relieved that their trip proved to be a short one, and managed to escape the struggle to the door with not only her arms and legs intact, but her clothes, also. It was like a sham battle, where everyone struggled and bumped and glowered at each other, and escaped calmly and without casualties. Connie had been carrying several parcels, and Marcia was surprised to discover that even they had survived.

The girls descended the steps from the station and walked another long block down a street of houses set closely together, and so identical, that Marcia wondered how their tenants knew in which they lived. There was not even the possibility of identification by a special tree or lawn decoration. There were no lawns, for the houses were set very close to the sidewalk, and identical iron-railed flights of steps approached all the front doors. Marcia decided that the curtains at the front windows were the solution, and noted that these varied as no architectural features could have done.

Connie had talked most of the way home, pointing out to Marcia various interesting facts that belonged to the city. Now, she said, "I suppose you have heard of the famous brown stone-houses of the late nineties. These are part of them, but there are endless blocks of them. I have often wondered how so many people could have been persuaded to forfeit their individuality, and particularly those people who could afford to build them. Because they were costly affairs for the time. This one is ours," she indicated with a gesture.

"How do you know?" smiled Marcia.

"By these absurd scrolls on the railings," laughed Connie, as she fitted a key into the lock of the high double-doored entrance.

They entered a high dim hall and were met without delay by a gentle, sad-faced woman who looked as if part of her life had ceased some fifteen years before. Her abundant hair, which had been golden like Connie's, but was now dulled without even the enhancement of silver-gray, was coiffed high on her head, which was carried proudly. Her close-belted gown with its fitted hips and flared skirt and ankle length might have belonged to the latest nineteen-thirty-one mode, had it not betrayed definitely the same features of an earlier cycle of fashion.

But her voice made immediate amends for these deficiencies in her appearance. It was softly resonant, like a clear-toned bell, and it sounded the note of her personality, which was kind and gracious, and sweetly plaintive.

Her face brightened when she saw Marcia, who thought that when this woman had been secure and loved and happy, she must have been very beautiful. She marveled that a woman like that could have survived the shock of poverty and struggle. Her own mother had possessed a sturdier nature, and a more practical ability.

Mrs. Deitz held Marcia's hand with a gentle appeal. "I am so glad you came, my dear. Connie needs friends

CHAPTER 41

MARCIA went home with Connie Deitz on the following evening. They walked on Thirty-fourth street to Sixth avenue, and took the elevated uptown. The train was so crowded that Marcia wondered how one more human being could be wedged into the writhing, swaying, strap-hanging mass, but every one seemed to take it as an everyday occurrence, so she concluded that it must be this, then, was not a special occasion when all the people in New York had tried to crowd into one train. She was relieved that their trip proved to be a short one, and managed to escape the struggle to the door with not only her arms and legs intact, but her clothes, also. It was like a sham battle, where everyone struggled and bumped and glowered at each other, and escaped calmly and without casualties. Connie had been carrying several parcels, and Marcia was surprised to discover that even they had survived.

The girls descended the steps from the station and walked another long block down a street of houses set closely together, and so identical, that Marcia wondered how their tenants knew in which they lived. There was not even the possibility of identification by a special tree or lawn decoration. There were no lawns, for the houses were set very close to the sidewalk, and identical iron-railed flights of steps approached all the front doors. Marcia decided that the curtains at the front windows were the solution, and noted that these varied as no architectural features could have done.

Connie had talked most of the way home, pointing out to Marcia various interesting facts that belonged to the city. Now she said, "I suppose you have heard of the famous brown stone houses of the late nineties. These are part of them, but there are endless blocks of them. I have often wondered how so many people could have been persuaded to forfeit their individuality, and particularly those people who could afford to build them. Because they were costly affairs for the time. This one is ours," she indicated with a gesture.

"How do you know?" smiled Marcia.

"By these absurd scrolls on the railings," laughed Connie, as she fitted a key into the lock of the high double-doored entrance.

They entered a high dim hall and were met without delay by a gentle, sad-faced woman who looked as if part of her life had ceased some fifteen years before. Her abundant hair, which had been golden like Connie's, but was now dulled without even the enhancement of silver-gray, was coiffed high on her head, which was carried proudly. Her close-belted gown with the fitted hipline and flared skirt and ankle length might have belonged to the latest nineteen-thirty-one mode, had it not betrayed definitely the same features of an earlier cycle of fashion.

But her voice made immediate demands for these deficiencies in her appearance. It was softly resonant, like a clear-toned bell, and it sounded the note of her personality, which was kind and gracious, and sweetly plaintive.

Her face brightened when she saw Marcia, who thought that when this woman had been secure and loved and happy, she must have been very beautiful. She marveled that a woman like that could have survived the shock of poverty and struggle. Her own mother had possessed a sturdier nature, and a more practical ability.

Mrs. Deitz held Marcia's hand with a gentle appeal. "I am so glad you came, my dear. Connie needs friends, and has so few. She is delighted at the thought of your coming here to stay with us while you are in New York. Perhaps you won't wish to after all—"

"But I do, if you will have me, Mrs. Deitz. I need friends, too, and I like Connie very much."

The older woman pressed Marcia's hand in her frail white one that had been spared the sordid tasks of life, even in her misfortune, and led her into the front room, adjoining the long hall. She smiled kindly, "To prove to you how much we want you with us, we are giving you the best room in the house. It is much, but it really is quite comfortable."

Marcia looked around the spacious, high-ceilinged room which once had represented the height of American elegance in homes. Plate-glassed bay windows looked onto the street, the gilded chandeliers, the polished mahogany tables, and the high-backed chairs. Her supported decorative globes of frosted, star-glass, the high door and windows were outlined

SACRIFICE BRINGS FINEST BLESSINGS EVANGELIST SAYS

"The answer to the question 'Is a Bird in the Hand Worth Two in the Bush?' depends upon what kind of a bird is in the hand and what kind of a bird is in the bush," said the Rev. Ralph E. Stewart to a large audience at the Tabernacle, E. Third St., Thursday night. More than 300 young people were present from several young people's societies.

The evangelist said in part: "Men have lost birds of paradise that were in the bush trying to save little English sparrows they held in their hands. The world owes some of its richest blessings and finest privileges to men who sacrificed the bird they held in their hands for better birds in the bush."

hush". The evangelist then cited Washington, Moses, Cyrus McCormick and the Pilgrim fathers as examples of those who sacrificed the smaller sure thing for the larger sacrifice.

"It is an old fallacy," the Rev. Mr. Stewart continued, "that the certain is preferable to the possible. You are holding the bird of self satisfaction, ease, home comforts, personal ambition, desire, complacency. And these are robbing you of greater achievements for Christ and His cause. Jesus of Nazareth could have compromised with Rome. The Imperial Empire would have welcomed a leader with power over the people. He dreamed of a world redeemed from poverty, injustice and slavery and went to the cross to accomplish the fact."

The meetings will continue into the third week starting with services Sunday and will be held every next week at 7:30 o'clock with the exception of Monday. Friday night is Sunday School and church night and Saturday night the Rev. Mr. Stewart will preach a special sermon on "The Christian and His Amusements."

A great mass meeting is planned for Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Tabernacle for men and boys only. The subject of the sermon will be "Four Men Under One Hat" and there will be special music by the "Good News Gospel Trio."

Sunday evening at 6 o'clock all young people's societies of churches of the city will meet at the Tabernacle for a Young People's Rally under the leadership of Homer Hammon and Paul Beckwith. Evangelistic services will start at 7 p. m. and the Rev. Mr. Stewart will preach on the topic, "Faces at the Window."

A strong wind from the sea is fanning many fresh fires, carrying a thick column of smoke as well as burnt paper down into the faces of Nanking road shoppers.

Foreign garrison commanders are considering suggesting the placing of a neutral garrison at the Woosung Ports to keep the Shanghai port open and at the same time guarantee the safety of shipping.

Just before noon a Japanese two-seater bomber was brought down 1000 yards northwest of the American lines. The plane was engaged in bombing a Chinese military position on the Shanghai-Nanking Railroad, in full view of our marines.

The bomber was flying at a 1,500-foot altitude when it suddenly was surrounded by bursts of anti-aircraft fire. The machine nosed up, then seemed to hang for a moment, and then went into a left-hand slow spin downward.

The Japanese pilot and observer both stuck to the ship, neither using his parachute. They apparently forgot to release their explosives in the bomb racks under the lower wing of the plane, because our marine observers saw a terrific explosion when the plane crashed to the ground by the village of Tsu Ka Wan, close by the Yangtze lines.

This was the first plane actually seen downed by foreign observers. The British protested this morning when shells dropped into their zone of the international settlement. In response to the protest, one Chinese and one Japanese junior officer arrived at the British headquarters to apologize.

The British didn't know whether the objectionable missiles were of Japanese or Chinese origin. Neither did the apologetic messengers, but it was their duty to apologize, so they did.

The Chinese military apologist said: "Velly sorry gunners on our anti-aircraft gun make mistake mathematics firing on Japanese plane. Velly sorry. Now find mistake and correct figures."

The Japanese military apologist said: "Please pardon but our gunners make slight error in elevation of cannon firing on Chinese station. Shell go high, miss station. Foll your zone. Very sorry. Locate error in firing data. Now lower range."

The British officer, accepting both apologies for the same shells, said: "You boys make me fell velly sorry I can't apologize to you and invite you to have the next shell on me."

Hostilities in the Chinese international theater definitely reached their highest pitch this morning when the fighting spread out, covering an area of some hundred square miles extending from points on the Nanking railroad south of Shanghai to the Woosung Forts.

The area included all the triangle of territory between the Whangpoo and Yangtze Rivers.

Japan was employing all arms—sea, land and air forces—with new strength and determination, but with the objective still unknown and unguessed by military and naval authorities at Shanghai.

Here's the summary of the complicated mess, which is getting hotter hourly as communication lines grow fewer and rumors wilder:

Chinese reinforcements hurriedly brought north overnight succeeded in dislodging and pushing back Japanese sailors who managed to advance into the eastern fringes of the Chinese city in the direction of the North Station.

The Chinese-Japanese artillery duel is increasing in intensity as new supplies and munitions reach the gunners of both sides. The Chinese are effectively employing guns of the highest caliber and some heavy field pieces located on the railroad to the west of the Chinese city.

Japanese bombing planes increased in number and activity, dropping more bombs on the Chinese ruins and lines surrounding the North Station, but failing to dislodge the defenders. Chinese anti-aircraft cannons are still firing and still out of control, with shells going wild in all directions.

Japanese regular army troops landed during the night on the south bank of the Yangtze between the Woosung Forts and the village of Paoshan are believed to have encountered unexpected stiff resistance, in spite of their front being protected by a stiff rain of shells from the Japanese cruisers lying down the Yangtze whose long-range, eight-inch shells are now reported falling on both sides of the railroad spur connecting Woosung with Shanghai.

Japanese destroyers patrolling the west bank of the Whangpoo River between here and Woosung are reported to be machine-gunning and light-shelling all traffic on the Chinese road running alongside the river bank. (I got caught out on that road last night in a futile attempt to reach Woosung).

American tourists aboard the liner President McKinley expected today must sail up the Whangpoo through the midst of shelling and machine-gunning, which already has disrupted shipping to such an extent that all schedules have gone by the board.

The American flagship Houston and destroyers are located at several buoys and docks down the river, keeping steam up prepared to shift their berths if the fighting approaches.

Several shells, believed to be Japanese long-range "overs," fell this morning near the customs magazine on the east bank of the Whangpoo, endangering that vicinity of a possible terrifying explosion. The magazine is stocked with TNT.

The Dollar Line's offices received a rush of applicants this morning for passage on the President Grant, expected to depart from here for Hong Kong tomorrow, but it is now booked to capacity, with all berths of all classes filled up. Four or five hundred were disappointed when they failed to get passage.

The applicants are mostly wives and children of foreign residents, about half of them Americans. Menfolk, heads of families, and business representatives are remaining.

The President McKinley, expected to leave here tomorrow for Kobe, enroute to Seattle, also is fully booked. British steamers bound for Hong Kong, Manila, or other points of the Far East also are fully booked.

SACRIFICE BRINGS FINEST BLESSINGS EVANGELIST SAYS

"The answer to the question 'Is a Bird in the Hand Worth Two in the Bush?' depends upon what kind of a bird is in the hand and what kind of a bird is in the bush," said the Rev. Ralph E. Stewart to a large audience at the Tabernacle, E. Third St., Thursday night. More than 300 young people were present from several young people's societies.

The evangelist said in part: "Men have lost birds of paradise that were in the bush trying to save little English sparrows they held in their hands. The world owes some of its richest blessings and finest privileges to men who sacrificed the bird they held in their hands for better birds in the bush."

The evangelist then cited Washington, Moses, Cyrus McCormick and the Pilgrim fathers as examples of those who sacrificed the smaller sure thing for the larger sacrifice.

"It is an old fallacy," the Rev. Mr. Stewart continued, "that the certain is preferable to the possible. You are holding the bird of self satisfaction, ease, home comforts, personal ambition, desire, complacency. And these are robbing you of greater achievements for Christ and His cause. Jesus of Nazareth could have compromised with Rome. The Imperial Empire would have welcomed a leader with power over the people. He dreamed of a world redeemed from poverty, injustice and slavery and went to the cross to accomplish the fact."

The meetings will continue into the third week starting with services Sunday and will be held every night next week at 7:30 o'clock with the exception of Monday. Friday night is Sunday School and church night and Saturday night the Rev. Mr. Stewart will preach a special sermon on "The Christian and His Amusements."

A great mass meeting is planned for Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Tabernacle for men and boys only. The subject of the sermon will be "Four Men Under One Hat" and there will be special music by the "Good News Gospel Trio."

Sunday evening at 6 o'clock all young people's societies of churches of the city will meet at the Tabernacle for a Young People's Rally under the leadership of Homer Hammonite and Paul Beckwith. Evangelistic services will start at 7 p. m. and the Rev. Mr. Stewart will preach on the topic, "Faces at the Window."
